 Ways for churches to participate

The seminar in Biblical principles will equip Christians for evangelism and apologetics, using homosexuality as a test case, one of the most difficult (yet easily winnable) issues of our time.

Earle Fox, received degrees from Trinity College, Hartford, CT (BA in philosophy), from the Episcopal General Theological Seminary, New York City (M. Div.), and from Oxford University in 1964 (D. Phil. in theology and science). He was ordained to the Episcopal priesthood in 1962. He did a year of clinical chaplaincy training in two mental hospitals, a prison, and a general hospital, and has been a pastoral counselor since 1960.

Earle Fox pastored St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in East Haddam, CT, from 1971-81. He founded Emmaus Ministries in 1984 for pastoral counseling and to produce teaching materials to help explain the Christian faith in the public arena in creative, reasonable, and Biblical terms.

In 1989, Fox began lecturing at the Exodus International conferences on the healing of homosexual addiction. He participated in the founding of Transformation Christian Ministries in the Washington, DC, metro area, an affiliate of Exodus (ministering to homosexual strugglers), and in the founding of Parents and Friends of Ex-Gays (ministering to the friends and relatives of homosexual strugglers). He was then director of Transformation Christian Ministries in Alexandria, Virginia, for a two and a half years until May of 2001.

He has returned to Emmaus Ministries from which he offers a seminar to churches on how to teach Biblical sexuality, minister to persons coming out of homosexuality, and deal with the homosexual agenda and other issues in the public arena.

He is co-author of Homosexuality: Good and Right in the Eyes of God? on how America was persuaded to accept homosexuality, how the empirical, scientific evidence lines up with Godly revelation while running about 100% against the homosexualist position, and on how God has given His people the strategy for winning the battle for honest and objective truth in the public arena.

Dr. Fox is currently teaching at Biola University in La
